FUNSTON SAYS PERSHING MAY WITHDRAW WITH HIS MEN

Energetic Campaign Being Waged
By Carranzistas Against Villa and His Bandits Promises To Satisfy Demands of U. S.

'PANCHE' AGAIN ELUDES
PURSUERS PRESSING HIM

Outlaw General Breaks Through Troops Closing In Upon Him and With Bodyguard Strikes Into Fastnesses of Mountains

(Associated Press by Federal Wireles.)

SAN ANTONIO, July 21.—It was admitted at General Funston's headquarters last night that orders for the withdrawal of General Pershing's command, south of the border, in Mexico, may be expected at any time. The feeling is that the de facto government in proving its intentions to be good and is showing an unexpected amount of energy in rounding up the bandita in southern Chihuahua and Durango and in Sonora.

This, it was declared, is all that the United States government has ever asked from the Carranzistas chiefs, and now that it is being done and there is every evidence of ultimate success, the American authorities are willing to withdraw from Mexico in order to show good faith and to give Carranza a free hand in the settlement of conditions in Mexico, where, it is admitted, great care and infinite patience is needed.

Villa Flees Into Mountains
Despatches from Chihuahua late last night said that Villa, with a bodyguard of six men, again has given the slip to the Carranzista troops, and is fleeing into the recesses of the mountains of Durango, hotly pursued by the de facto troops. The bands of Villistas have scattered through the country, and it is believed that they will go into hiding.

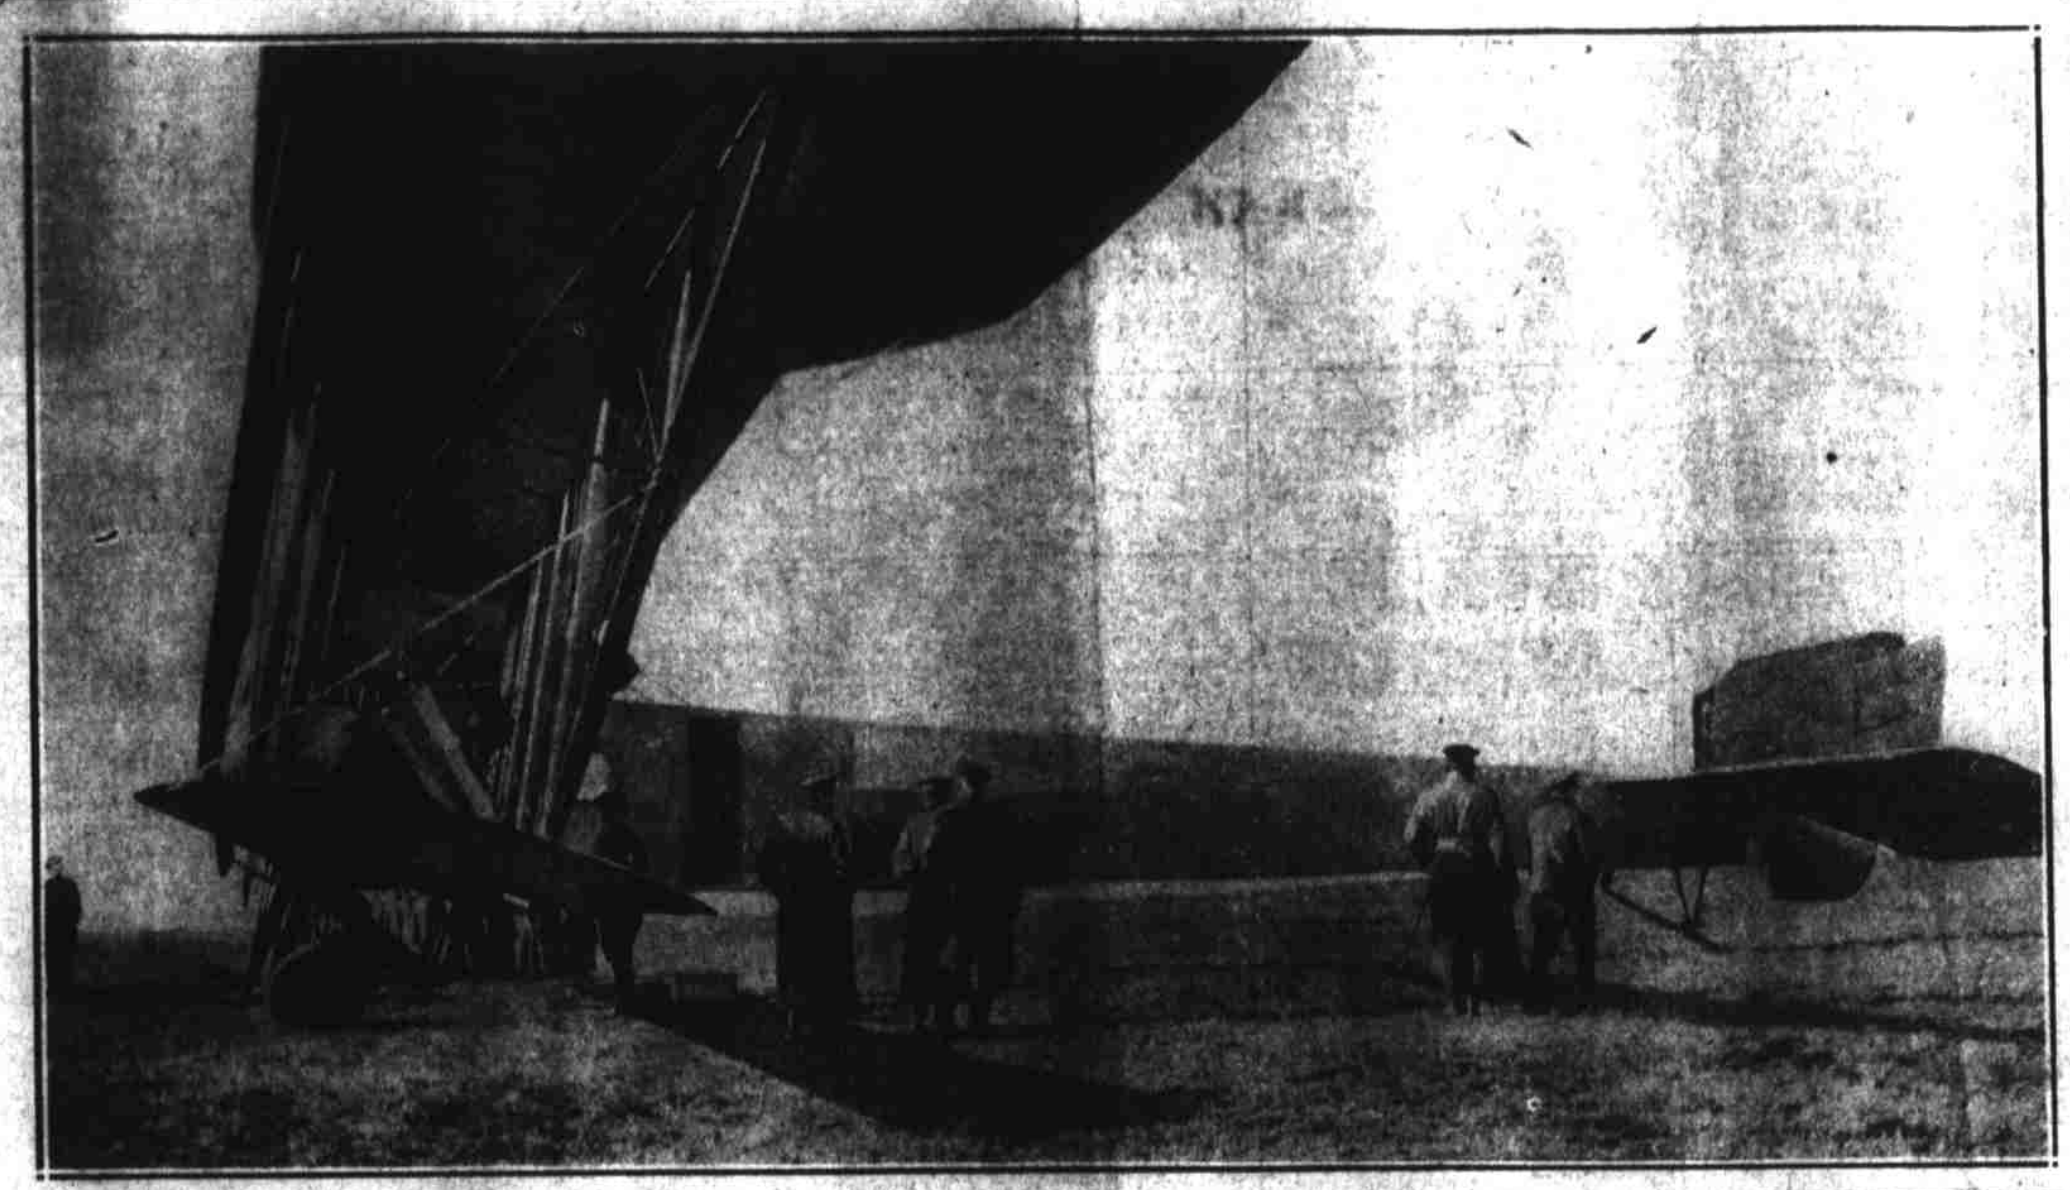

The federal troops under General Trevino, which have been chasing Villa and his outlaw bands, were close on Villa's heels yesterday, and it was believed that the capture of the bandit chief might come at any moment. Villa was reported early in the day to be in the vicinity of Amador and to have been surrounded by troops commanded by General Ramos, Trevino's immediate subordinate. Ramos is said to have 4000 troops with him.

Americans Will Concentrate
General Funston announced last night that he has decided to concentrate five regiments at Deming, New Mexico. This is one of the most important strategic positions on the border, permitting of speedy action in a number of directions and against important positions south of the line.

General Funston has not made public any further plans for mobilization of troops on the border, nor has any intimation come from army headquarters here regarding the length of time the national guardsmen are likely to be held for border duty.

There has been considerable slackening of the movement of militia regiments to the front during the last few days. Recruiting also is reported to have fallen off materially since the war department order instructing the State authorities to see that the regiments and other units designed for border duty are fully equipped before being sent to the line.

STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK Four Thousand Now Moving Cargo

(Associated Press by Federal Wireles.)
SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—Four thousand striking stevedores went back to work yesterday, and hundreds more, including many of the lumber handlers, are expected to resume their jobs today.

The waterfront hummed with activity as it has not done since the beginning of the strike several weeks ago. The bay and river men were among the first to return to their former positions at the old wage scale, and without the question of "open" or "closed" shop having been settled.

CARRANZA APPROVES CONFERENCE PLANS

Arredondo and Polk Settling Final Details
(Associated Press by Federal Wireles.)
WASHINGTON, July 21.—General Carranza, head of the de facto government of Mexico, has notified the Mexican ambassador-designate, Senator Arredondo, that he has approved of the proposed methods and plans for the coming conference between representatives of the United States and representatives of Mexico, as telegraphed to the City of Mexico Wednesday.

This announcement was made yesterday afternoon, following a long conference between Senator Arredondo and Counsellor Polk, for the state department, at which it is reported final details were settled.

It was reported that the commissioners will be empowered to discuss all questions pending between the two governments, including the gradual retirement of General Pershing's command from the positions it now holds south of the border.

Transport Is Rammed At Golden Gate

Crook On Her Way To Alaska Collides With Japanese Liner
Anyo Maru

(Associated Press by Federal Wireles.)
SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—The United States army transport Crook collided with the Anyo Maru, as the transport was leaving the Golden Gate yesterday afternoon, bound for Alaska.

A dense fog hung over the whole bay at the time of the crash, and the two vessels were close aboard of each other before warning was given of the danger of collision.

Three plates on the side of the Crook were stove in and the transport was forced to put back to her dock for repairs before proceeding to Alaska.

The Japanese liner was uninjured, and continued on her way as soon as she found the Crook was not seriously damaged. The only harm the Japanese suffered was when anchor of the Crook dragged away a portion of her rail. She had 400 Asiatic passengers on board.

Shortly after this collision the steamer Queen and Argonaut collided in the fog, but little damage was done.

FIGHT ON NAVY BILL LOST Measure Likely To Be Passed Today

(Associated Press by Federal Wireles.)
WASHINGTON, July 21.—Single-handed, Senator La Follette struggled for hours against the administration's Naval Appropriation Bill yesterday, only to go down to defeat when he failed to secure the ratification by the senate of his amendment to the act prohibiting the use of the "navy to collect private debts, or to enforce the claims of citizens or corporations of the United States against governments or private individuals of other countries."

It was the first opportunity the senate had had to vote on any of the ideas put forward by Senator La Follette in his fight on the bill, and they took advantage of the opportunity to snuff him under. The vote against his amendment stood forty-four to eight.

The passage of the bill today was predicted on all sides at the capitol last night. The debate on the Army Appropriation Bill probably will follow immediately upon the heels of the naval appropriation measure.

As soon as possible after yesterday's session began La Follette resumed the fight he had begun the day before on the naval bill, and the entire preparedness propaganda of the administration. He attacked without mercy the Wilson administration's policy, and declared that the so-called "preparedness" movement is but a political move on the part of the Democrats. He warned the senate that the only limit to naval expenditures would be the taxable limit of the people.

Nor did his fellow-senators escape from his scathing tongue. The veteran of the senate, Senator Gallinger, was stung to action when the Wisconsin senator declared that members of this congress "are nothing but representatives of the interests."

After drawing a picture of the duties and opportunities of the office postmasters hold under the public, Mr. Wilson spoke of the opportunities for real service, present in the United States. This country, he declared, is one of a very few where there are no lines of hostilities drawn between man and man and between the public and the public servants, from the President down to the most lowly official.

"In no other country in the world are the processes of the government so easy to move, as they are here," he said.

Mr. Wilson urged the postmasters to prove to the Nation their earnest desire to "grow capable of giving the people just what they want and need in the manifold relations of your offices to the life of the Nation."

ENTENTE IS EVERYWHERE BEATING ON TEUTON LINE

British Drive Wedge Thousand
Yards Deep Into German Flank
At Longueval; French Take
Five Miles of Foes' Trenches

PARIS CLAIMS TWENTY-NINE HUNDRED MORE PRISONERS

Brussiloff, Reinforced With Masses of Men and Munitions Resumes His Terrific Pounding On Entire Teutonic in the East

(Associated Press by Federal Wireles.)

LONDON, July 21.—Once again the Allies, east and west are smashing with sledge hammer blows at the lines of the Teutons. British and French in the west have driven the German units out of their positions, the British for a depth of more than one thousand yards between Longueval and Bezancon, and the French south of the river Somme over a front of more than five miles, yesterday took the entire system of first line trenches, which were the third line when the assault began two weeks ago, and 2000 German prisoners as well.

Along the eastern line the period of waiting for reinforcements and fresh supply of ammunition for the Russian supply bases apparently come to an end, and General Brussiloff is again hurling dense masses of men against the German lines east of Kovol on the Stokhod river. From north to south of the fifteen hundred mile front the Slavs are thundering ceaselessly at the weakening German lines.

Already the neutral critics are beginning to wonder how much longer the thinned lines of the two Kaisers can continue to hold their present positions. The extended lines of the Germans and Austrians served well enough, it is pointed out, as long as the allies were content to sit in their trenches and wait for the assault of the Teutonic armies, but now that the role has been changed and the soldiers of the Entente are doing the attacking the situation is becoming desperate for the Germans and their southern allies, it is asserted.

Only the vast number of machine guns and their splendid system of entrenchments, it is declared by critics of neutral nations, have enabled the Teutons to hold fast for so long under blows unequalled even in this most stupendous of all wars. Until now Germany and Austria, or rather the Central powers, including Bulgaria and Turkey, have been on the offensive. Now they are on the defensive and the neutrals are looking with amazement at the stand the Teutons are making.

Teutons Brave Sea Death
At one point near Heslino, when the British troops swarmed into the open for an attack and began breasting the slope of the trench, the German machine gunners left their positions, carrying their guns with them and ran to a point where they could enfilade the British, in spite of the certainty of being shot down in a minute or two by the shell of British artillery that was sweeping the whole line.

It was here, however, in spite of the stubborn resistance, that the British made their biggest gain, penetrating 1000 yards into the heart of the German lines. At Delville Wood the fighting was desperate, but there also the British advanced, though but slowly.

South of the river the French resumed their attacks, striving to straighten out the slight salient in their line between Barlon and Soyecourt. The attack was made on a five mile front and the whole first line of German trenches between Esters and Villiers passed into the hands of the attackers. The north trenches in the Hardcourt sector were taken by storm.

Deus Busy At Verdun
On the Verdun battle field the Germans have resumed their bombardment of the French lines at Avoport and Chantannet, by only minor attacks.

Russia, her armies reinforced with men and munitions, including supplies of gigantic cannon from Japan and squadrons of the new monster aeroplanes, has once again started beating in the Teutonic lines.

General Brussiloff last night officially announced that he had resumed his advance on the Stokhod river toward Kovol, the key of the northern line, which, once in his possession, will unlock the band of steel Germany has bound along the western frontier of Little Russia. Berlin reports that the Russian assaults have been repulsed. Drive Wedge Deeper
